Scott and Heather Thorton of Palatine have won a new roof valued between $7,000-$12,000 from Mt. Prospect-based Peterson Roofing as part of the company's "No Roof Left Behind" contest.

Peterson scheduled the roof installation project for Saturday, Oct. 12 weather permitting, with Saturday, Oct. 19 as the rain date.

According to company officials, the Thortons, whose son is serving in the Marines, have committed themselves to service projects making life easier for members of the military deployed and families at home. Heather works with special needs students while Scott works temporary jobs, side jobs, but most often can be seen helping neighbors.

"We were touched by the community support and Peterson Roofing's generosity," the winners said. "We are always hearing about bad things in the world, seeing something like this happen makes you realize there is also a lot of good."

Other local businesses have pledged to support the No Roof Left Behind initiative as well. Employees from CEDA Northwest will help with the installation celebration and Bone Roofing Supply and IKO will donate some of the materials. "We are very happy to see other community leaders have stepped up to assist," Jim Peterson, Jr. said. "Teaming up for the good of the community has been one of the program highlights."
